NINTH GRADE

World History: 1500 to the Present

In the ninth grade, students develop strong personal opinions, beliefs, or positions on current issues and events of the past. Teachers capitalize on this characteristic to stress the importance of grounding positions and opinions in knowledge. As students transition from middle school to high school, they can understand and use complex concepts such as adaptation, assimilation, acculturation, diffusion, and historical knowledge and inquiry to study the past, its relationship to the present, and its impact on the future. Students in Grade 9 are able to think critically and logically about personal, national, and global issues. This enables them to apply and utilize their knowledge and curiosity to develop informed opinions about issues such as the quest for peace, human rights, trade, and global ecology.

At the ninth-grade level, students continue the study of world history from 1500 to the present. Critical thinking and analysis are important in this course. Through historical inquiry, students gain an understanding and appreciation of history as a story of people much like themselves and become increasingly able to understand global interdependence and connections among world societies. The course directs students to think critically about the forces that combine to shape the world today. It allows them to analyze development and changes in the European, Asian, African, and American civilizations and ways in which the interactions of these cultures have influenced the formation of today's world. Knowledge of other cultures enables students to develop a better appreciation of the unique American heritage of liberty. Geographic concepts increase learners' comprehension of global connections as they expand their knowledge and understanding of a wide variety of cultures, both historical and contemporary.

Ninth-grade students continue to have preferred learning styles. Therefore, the use of a variety of instructional strategies and techniques is effective in helping students gain the knowledge and skills this course requires. Well-equipped classrooms include a variety of visual stimuli such as charts, globes, graphs, and maps. Multiple opportunities are provided for students to participate in the educational process through the use of electronic and print media and small-group interaction.

GRADES 10–12

Overview

The educational program of all Alabama high school students includes a comprehensive curriculum of essential social studies content that prepares students to be knowledgeable, responsible citizens capable of applying social studies knowledge and skills in their daily lives. The emphases of the Grades 10-12 social studies program are civic competence and participation and economic, geographic, and historical awareness. Careful consideration has been taken to align the social studies content at the high school level with standards addressed by national social studies organizations.

All Alabama high school students must earn four credits in social studies for graduation. As part of these requirements, students must complete United States History to 1877 (one credit), United States History From 1877 to the Present (one credit), United States Government (one-half credit), and Economics (one-half credit). The content of these core courses requires students to examine the period from prediscovery to the present, looking at the issues explored in Grades 8 and 9 from the perspective of the United States. The United States History to 1877, United States History From 1877 to the Present, United States Government, and Economics courses described in this document provide fundamental content to be learned by all high school students that enables them to become responsible citizens and active participants in local, state, national, and global societies. In addition to the World History course required in Grade 9 and the four courses required for Grades 10-12, local school systems may offer elective social studies courses. These may include, but are not limited to, further study of current events, geography, sociology, and psychology. Elective courses such as these enrich students' development of civic responsibility.

In addition to increasing factual knowledge, tenth- through twelfth-grade students are developmentally capable of abstract reasoning, critical thinking, and sophisticated problem solving. The courses required in Grades 10-12 foster the growth of productive citizens as students engage in opportunities for analyzing complex issues. The instructional environment also provides opportunities for active civic participation, social science research, and authentic learning through a variety of methods and tools such as the use of primary sources, written analysis of information, debate, presentation, simulation, technology, and experimentation. Although not all strands are indicated for all content standards, teachers are encouraged to incorporate the perspective of each strand into each standard where applicable.

TENTH GRADE

United States History to 1877

The study of the history of the United States in Grade 10 takes students on a journey across five centuries of social, economic, geographic, and political development in the United States. Students begin with the earliest discoveries on the North American continent and follow a chronological study of the major events, issues, movements, leaders, and groups of people of the United States through Reconstruction from a national and an Alabama perspective. The content standards build upon the foundation students gained in the study of the United States in Grades 5 and 6, as well as the study of world history in Grades 8 and 9, but require a more rigorous analysis. The content and level of rigor in the tenth-grade course are developmentally appropriate. With more fully developed skills in abstract thinking, students are now able to compare, analyze, and explain events and developments.

ELEVENTH GRADE

United States History From 1877 to the Present

The study of the history of the United States in Grade 11 continues the journey begun in Grade 10 through the economic, geographic, social, and political development of the United States. Beginning with the post-Reconstruction United States and its shift into a more industrialized society, the course continues through the twentieth century to the present. Students are involved in a chronological study of major events, issues, movements, and leaders of the United States through the present from both a national and an Alabama perspective. Students are actively involved in and are challenged by the level of expectation inherent in the required content of this course. With more fully developed skills in abstract thinking, students compare, analyze, and explain events and developments rather than simply list or identify them.

In order to provide a classroom environment that encourages all students to reach their potential, teachers employ various instructional methods to facilitate students' pursuit of knowledge about the United States. Instruction that includes individual and group research, debate, presentation, and the employment of current technology such as interactive digital video software and Internet sources provides students with extensive opportunities to explore and analyze historical topics and interpretations.

TWELFTH GRADE

Economics

Economics is a one-semester required course for the twelfth grade that focuses on functions and institutions of modern-day economic systems and economic theory. Students use the knowledge and analytical-thinking skills learned in previous courses and grades to analyze issues and problems in contemporary economic systems. They examine the consequences of public policies and their impact upon current economic conditions. Mastering economics knowledge and skills enables students to anticipate changes in economic conditions and to take appropriate action that improves their lives as well as society.

Twelfth-grade students are developmentally capable of complex analytical thinking. Many twelfth-grade students are already actively contributing to the economy through participation as consumers or employees. Course content and effective instructional methods encourage the development of skills for recognizing economic and social problems, proposing alternatives, and evaluating the costs and benefits of choices. To involve all students in learning activities that interest them, that assist in retention of learning, and that provide valuable life skills, Grade 12 Economics is designed to include analysis of primary sources and economic data, economic research using technological resources, group presentations using computer technology, and active learning opportunities such as simulation.

TWELFTH GRADE

TWELFTH GRADE

United States Government

United States Government is a one-semester required course for Grade 12. Its goal is to foster the development of civic competence and civic participation for all students. In this course, students use the knowledge and analytical thinking skills learned in the Grades 10-11 United States History courses to focus on the origins, structure, and functions of government at all levels in the nation. Emphasis is placed on intellectual factors that influenced the development of a republic based on the rule of law, freedom of opportunity, individual liberty, and representative democracy. The course also includes a detailed study of the Constitution of the United States and its provisions. Students go beyond the acquisition of facts to develop skills for collection, in-depth analysis, and interpretation of information important to the study of government. Students in the Grade 12 United States Government course engage in analysis of primary sources, including those specific to the founding of the United States, speeches, landmark Supreme Court cases, and relevant political commentaries.

Twelfth-grade students have achieved developmental maturity sufficient for in-depth analysis of societal issues, problems, and solutions. These students have the potential to become participating citizens in the fullest sense—voting, jury duty, and political office. Therefore, twelfth graders benefit from an instructional environment that promotes critical thinking and research and provides opportunities for civic participation. Social science research using technological resources and presentation with computer technology is encouraged. Simulation and debate offer vital interaction with peers that also aids in social development, fosters long-term learning of content, and encourages all students to reach their potential.
